The book is divided into three sections: "The Personal Is Political," "The Body Politic," and "The Future of Trans and Non-Binary People." The first section explores the personal experiences of transgender and non-binary people, including their struggles with identity, discrimination, and violence. The second section examines the political landscape for transgender and non-binary people, including the fight for legal rights and the impact of anti-trans legislation. The third section looks to the future of transgender and non-binary people, exploring the possibilities for greater acceptance and equality.

The essays, stories, and poems in this book are all unique, but they are united by a common theme: the power of the human voice. These individuals are speaking out against discrimination and violence, and they are demanding to be heard. Their voices are powerful, and they are changing the world.
